Voyage Voyage Into "The Beings"

BON VOYAGE!

introduction

episode 1

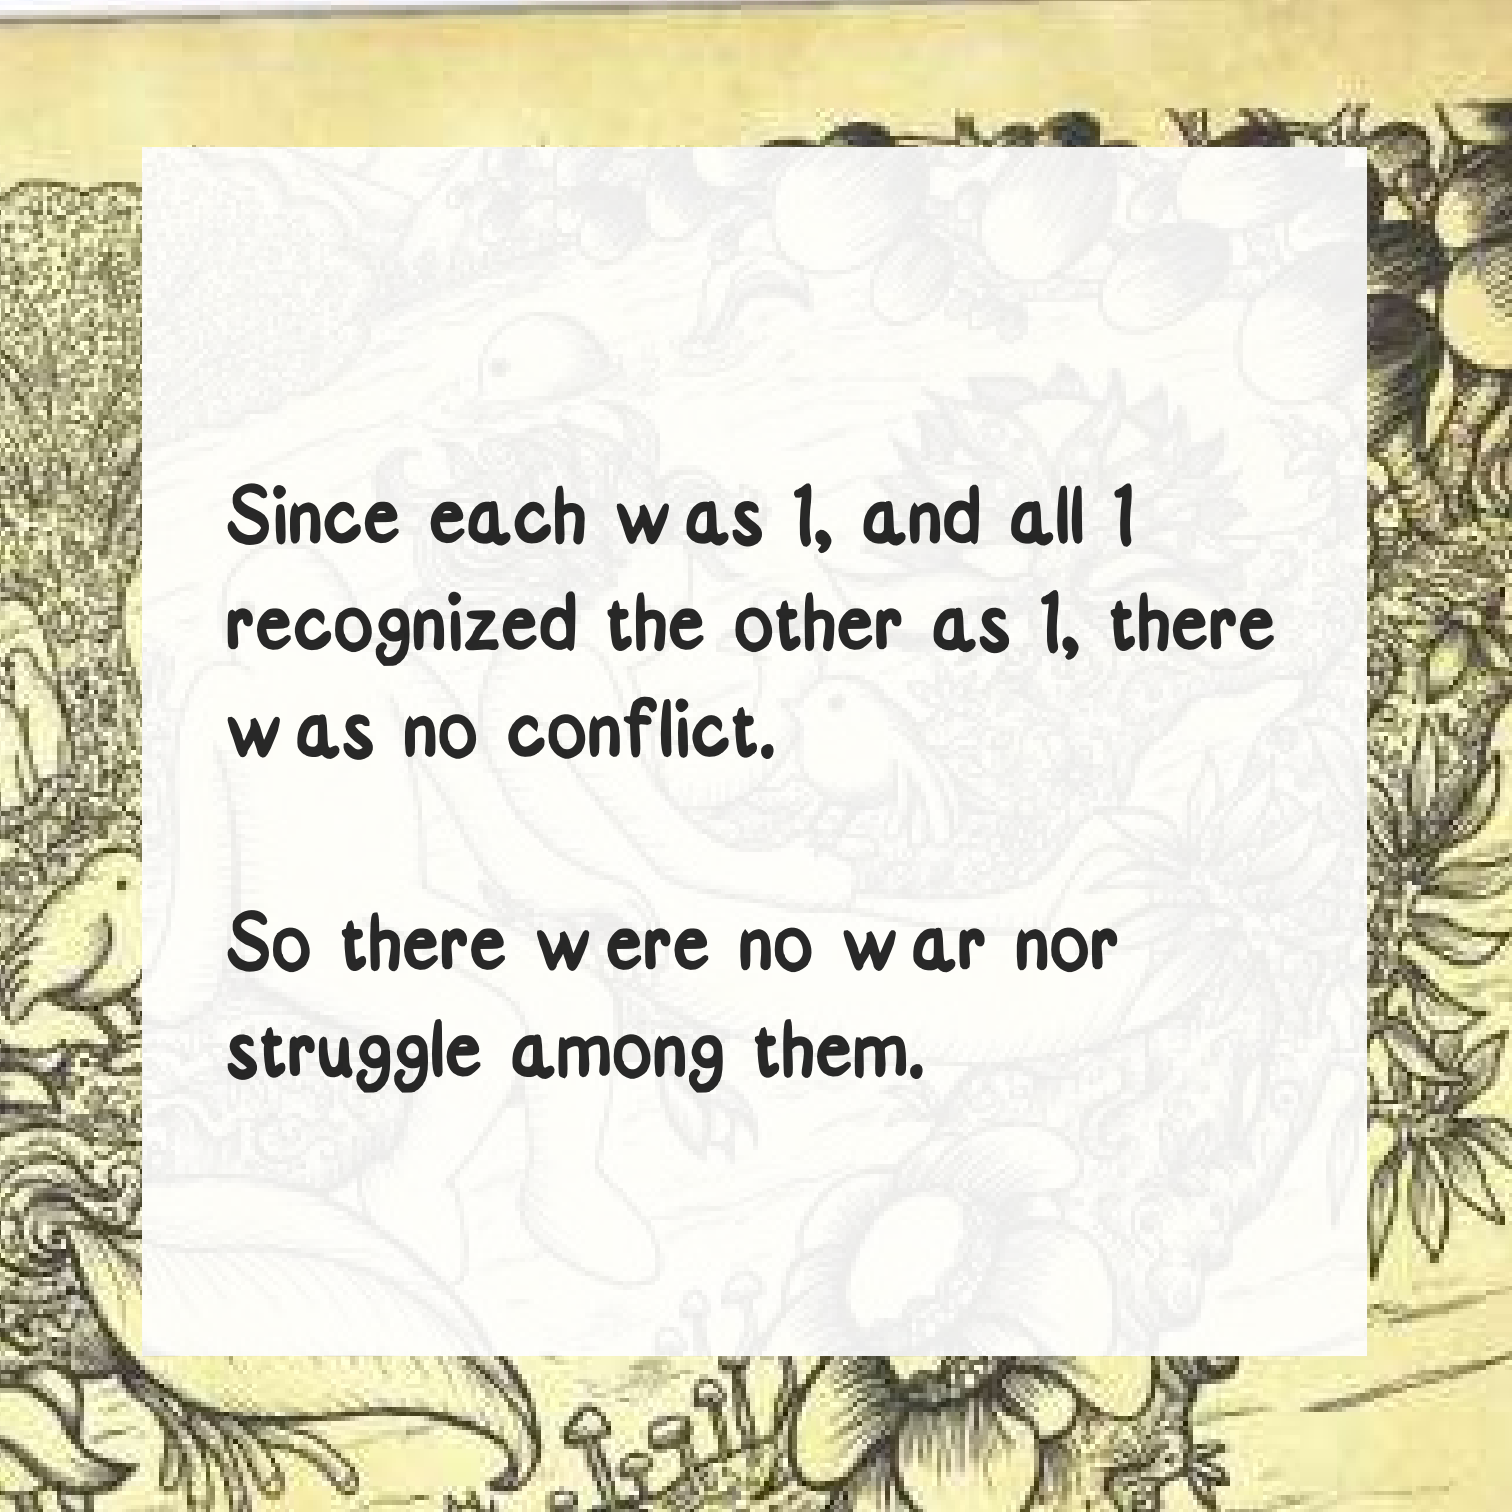

They did not know how to count.

The idea hadn 't even occurred to them.

For our understanding, two concepts manage their life.

The 1 (One) which symbolizes the existing, the present, the known, and the 0 (zero) which means at the same time the unknown, the infinite, the unimaginable.

Since each was 1, and all 1 recognized the other as 1, there was no conflict.

So there were no war nor struggle among them.

They recognized trees, animals, insects like 1.

Thus their actions were directed towards the well being of these other beings or other consciousnesses of life, with whom they shared their existence.

Their well being was
their well being.

They learned a lot from them.

In particular, this very familiar ability they had learned:
the one of adapting, evolving,
experimenting by simply observing their environment.

So their bodies were imbued with characteristics of these other life consciousnesses.

Gills allowed them to breathe underwater and lungs on land.

Some could fly like birds and insects.

Others moved on the ground, on the plants.

The relationships they had with their playmates were very peaceful and friendly.

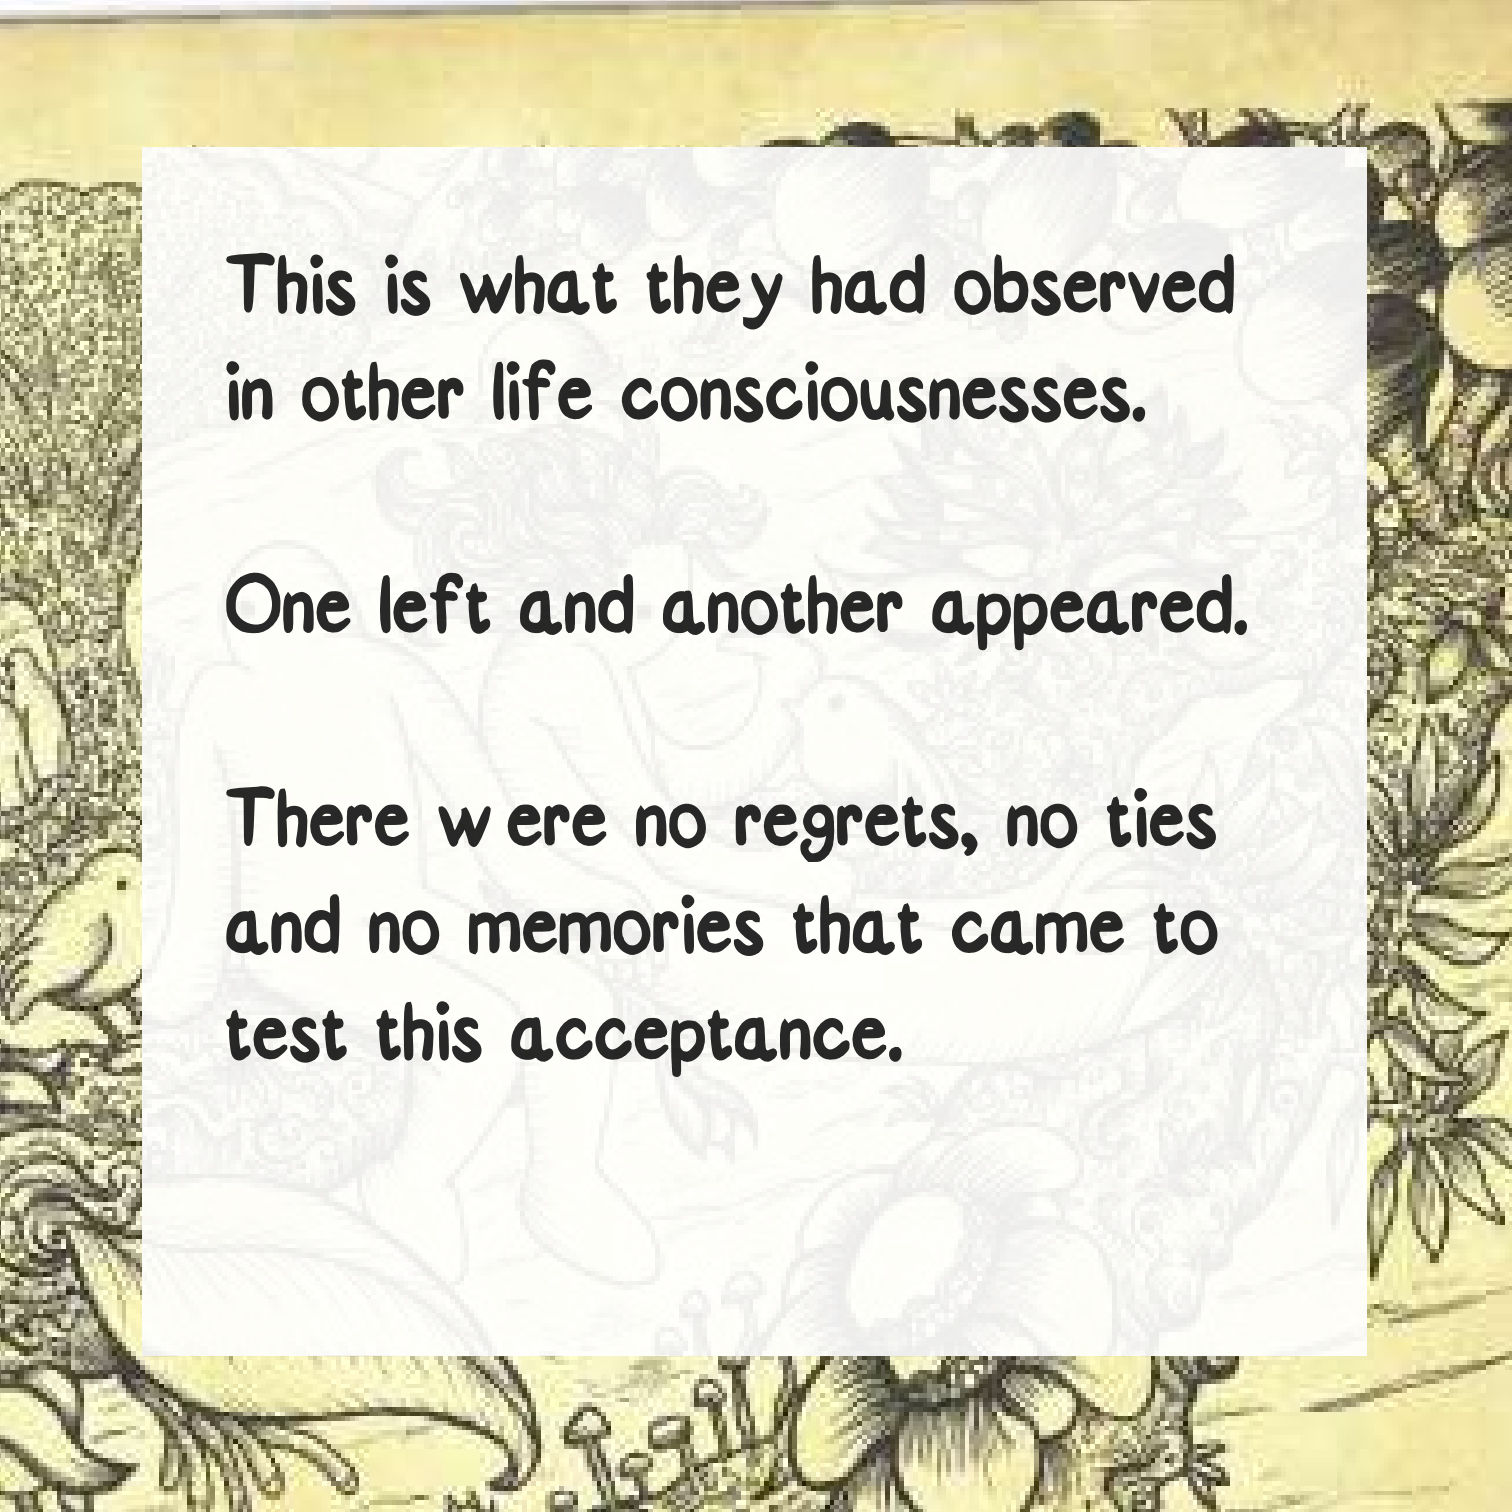

They communicated with them in a very simple and easy way.

Time had no reality, strictly speaking.

There was no certain end-of-life deadline.

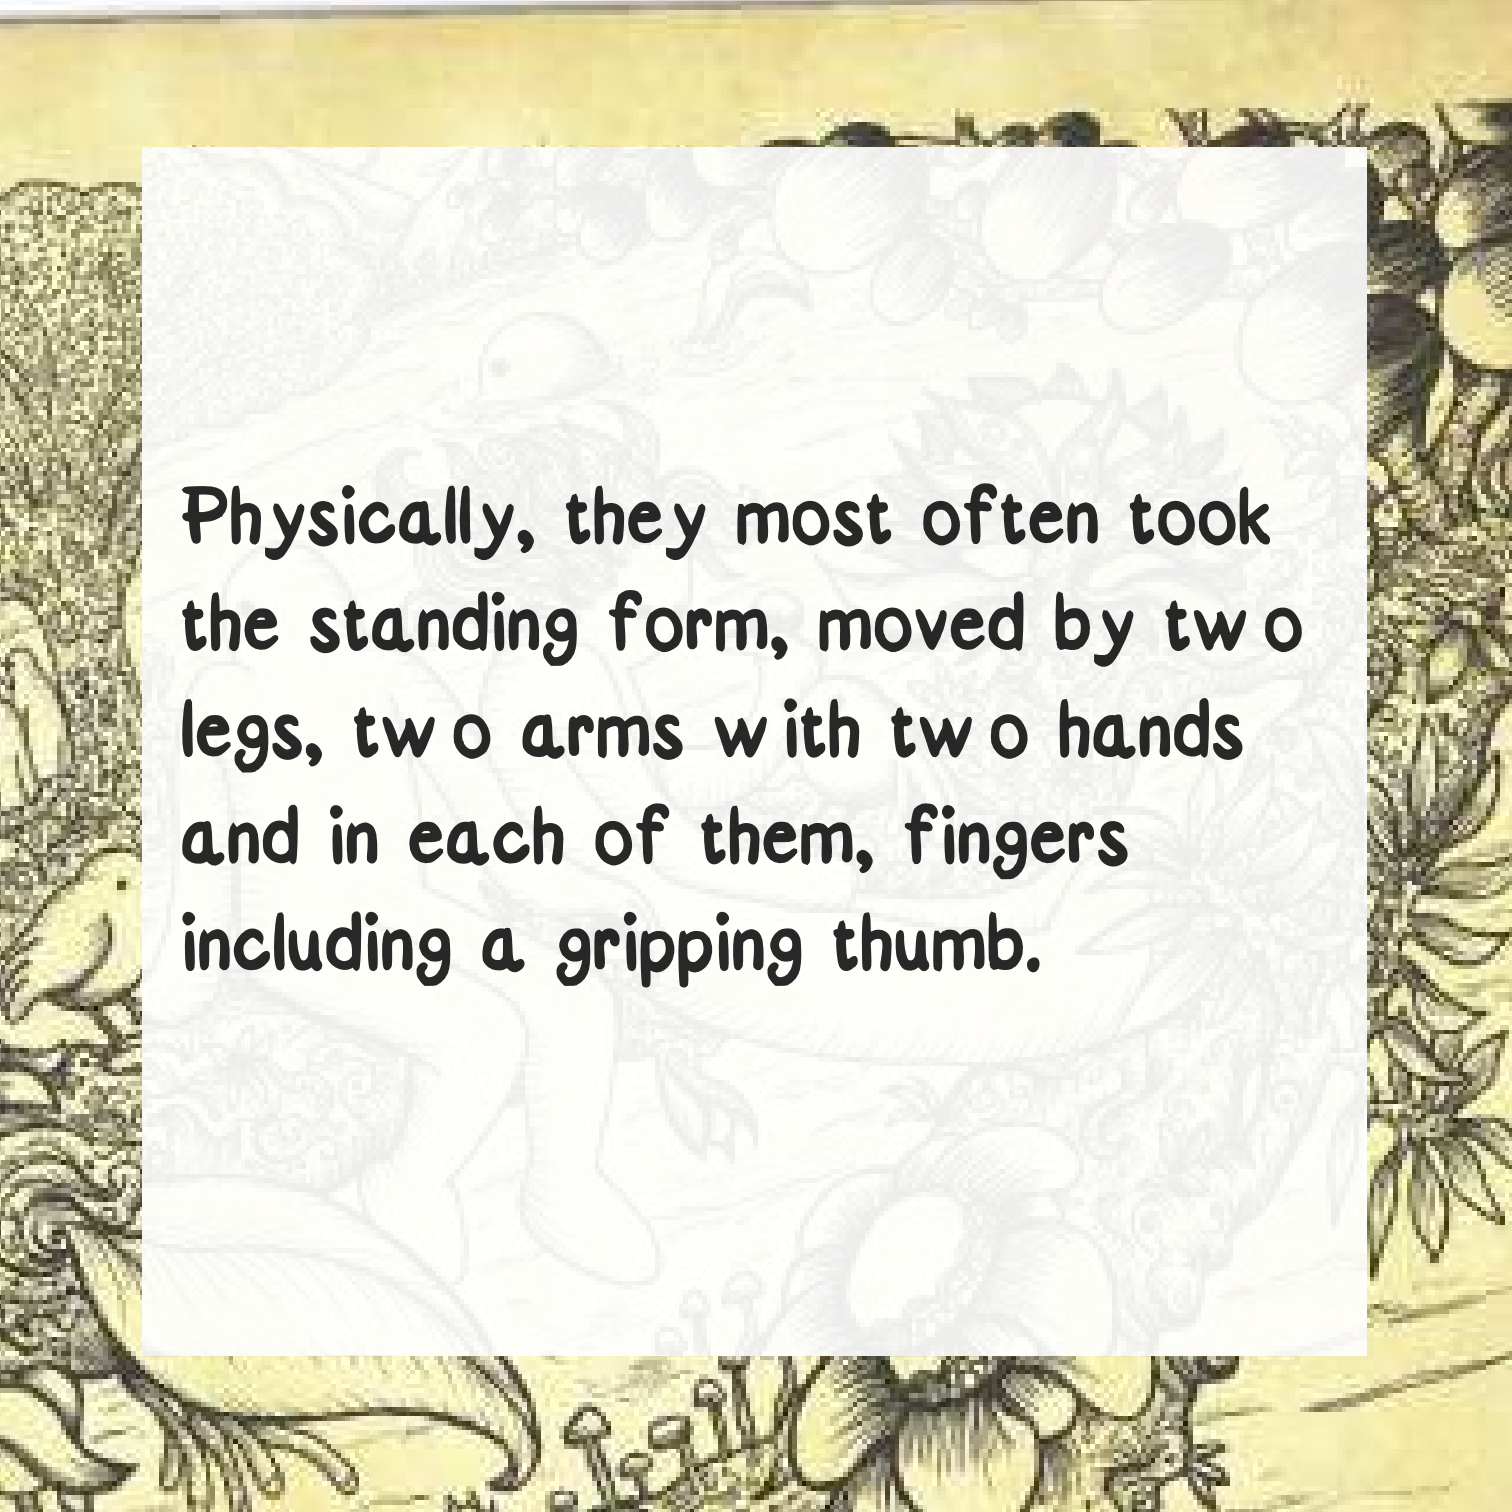

And if that happened, the event was accepted as part of the movement of life.

This is what they had observed in other life consciousnesses.

One left and another appeared.

There were no regrets, no ties and no memories that came to test this acceptance.

Physically, they most often took the standing form, moved by two legs, two arms with two hands and in each of them, fingers including a gripping thumb.

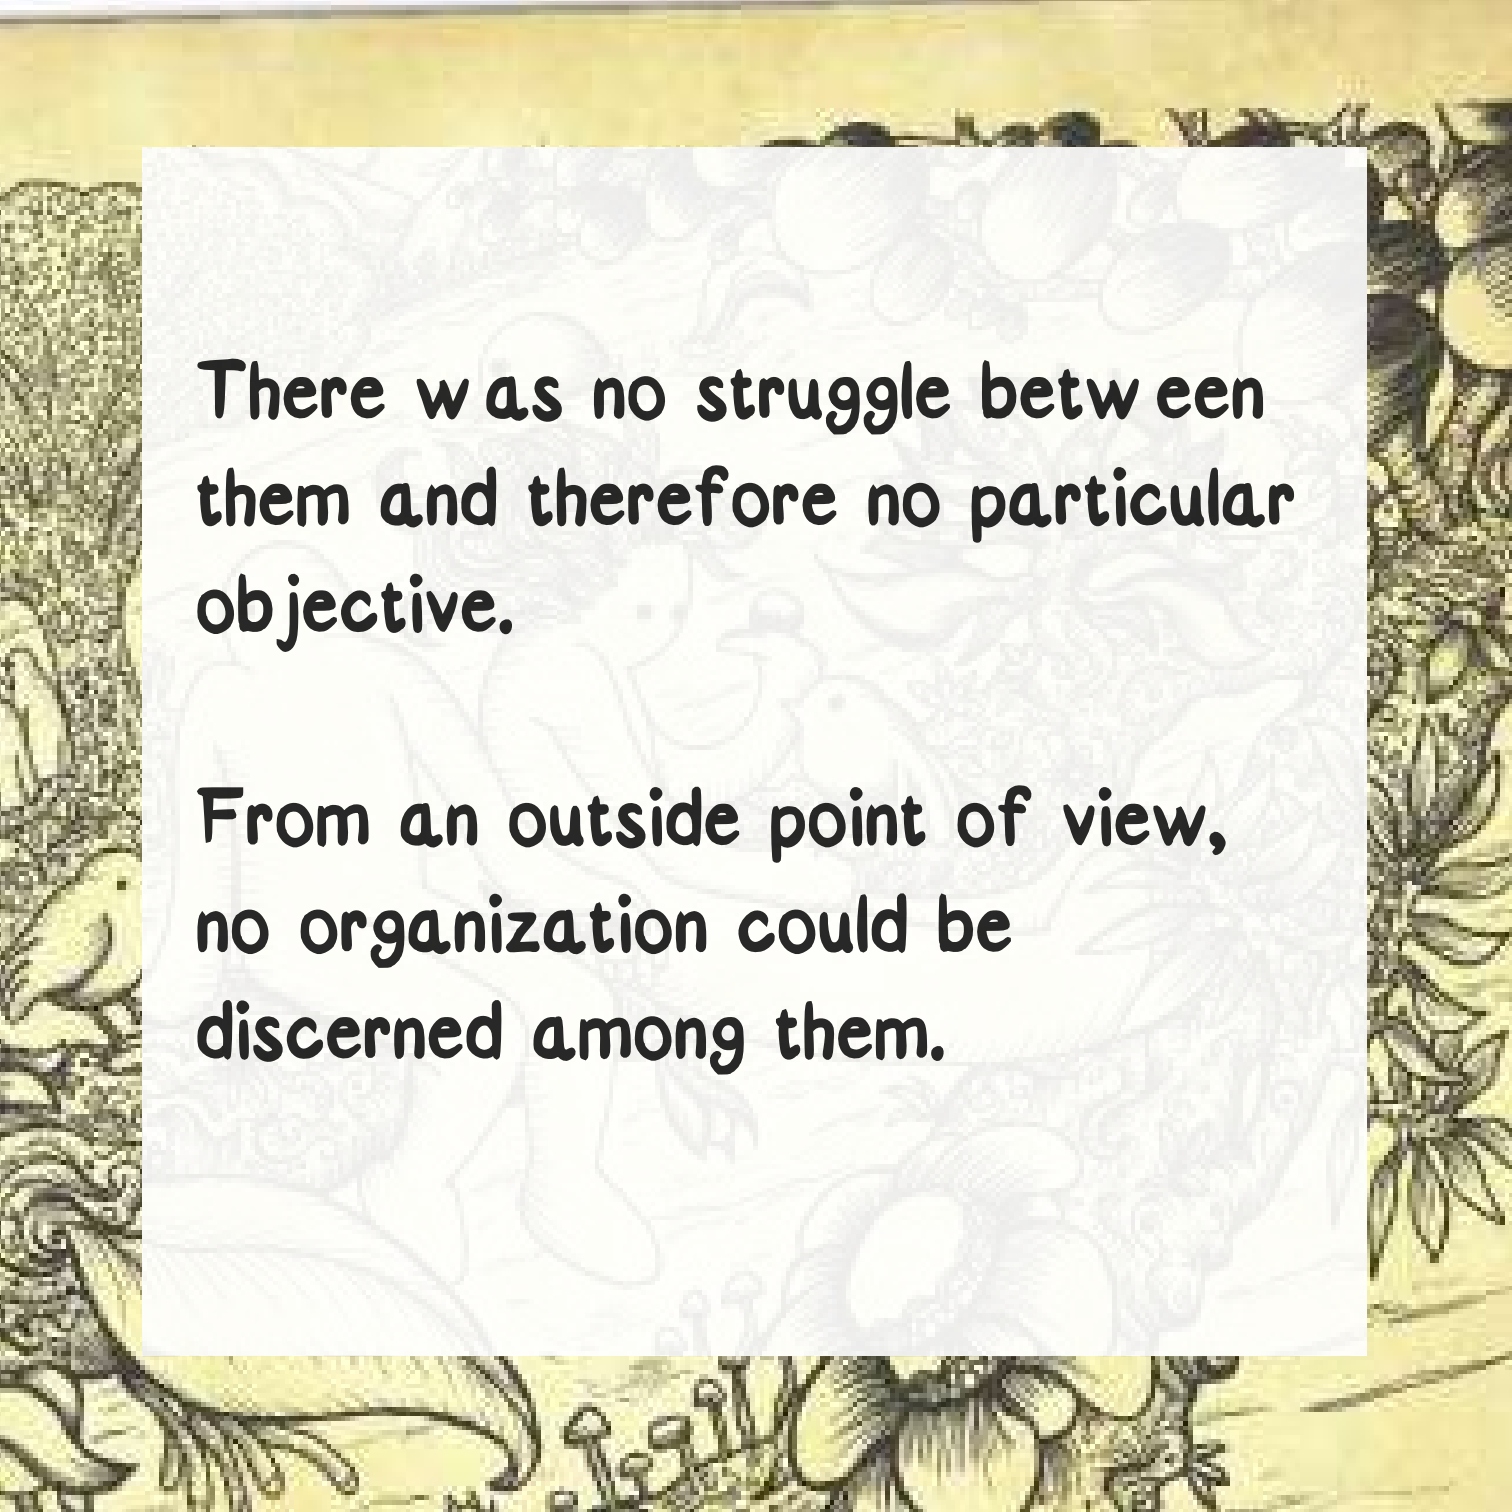

Their heads integrated the most common senses that we know.

Their organs functioned by absorbing surrounding energy autonomously and could even anticipate certain needs depending on the situation.

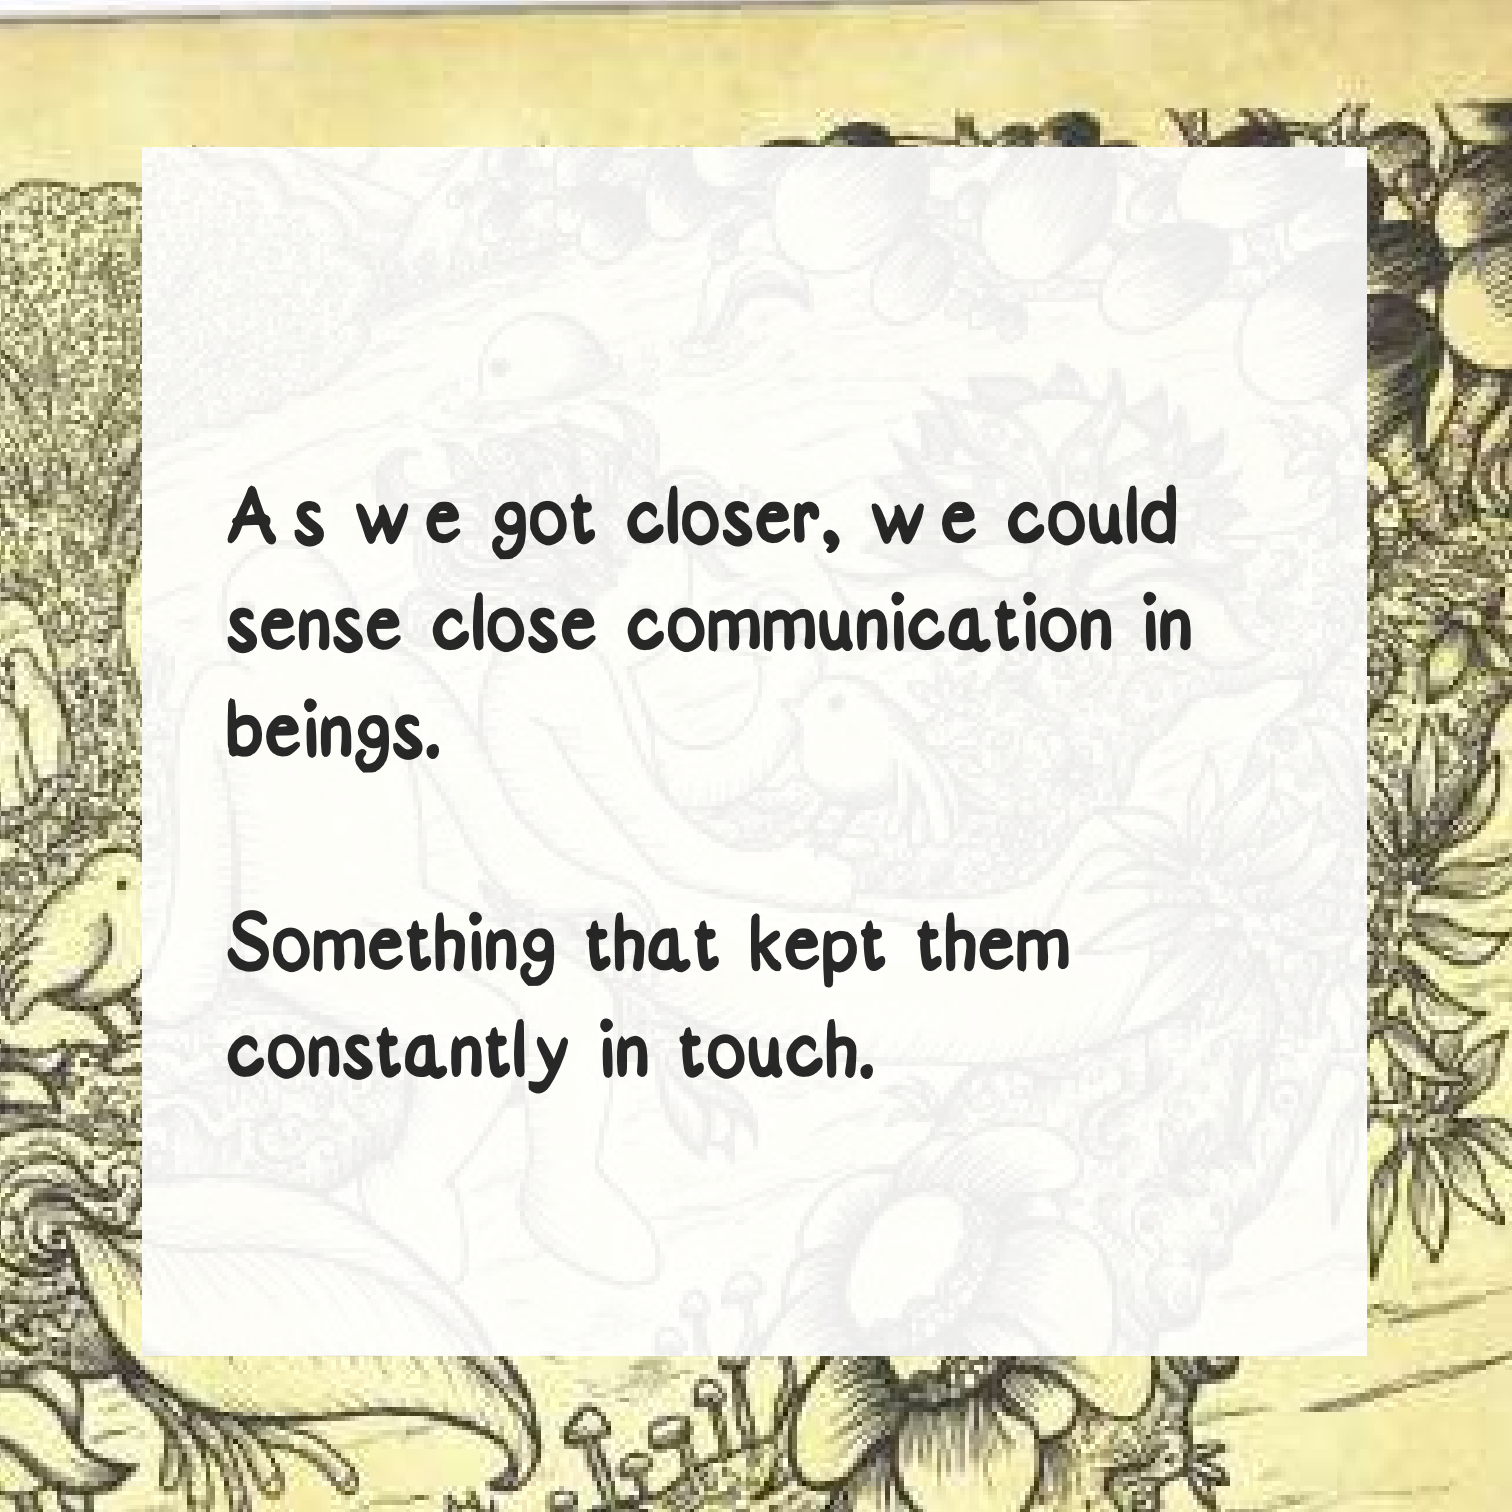

They have been living for millennia now, enjoying every moment and greeting each day the life force that influenced their bodies and every grain of matter in their world.

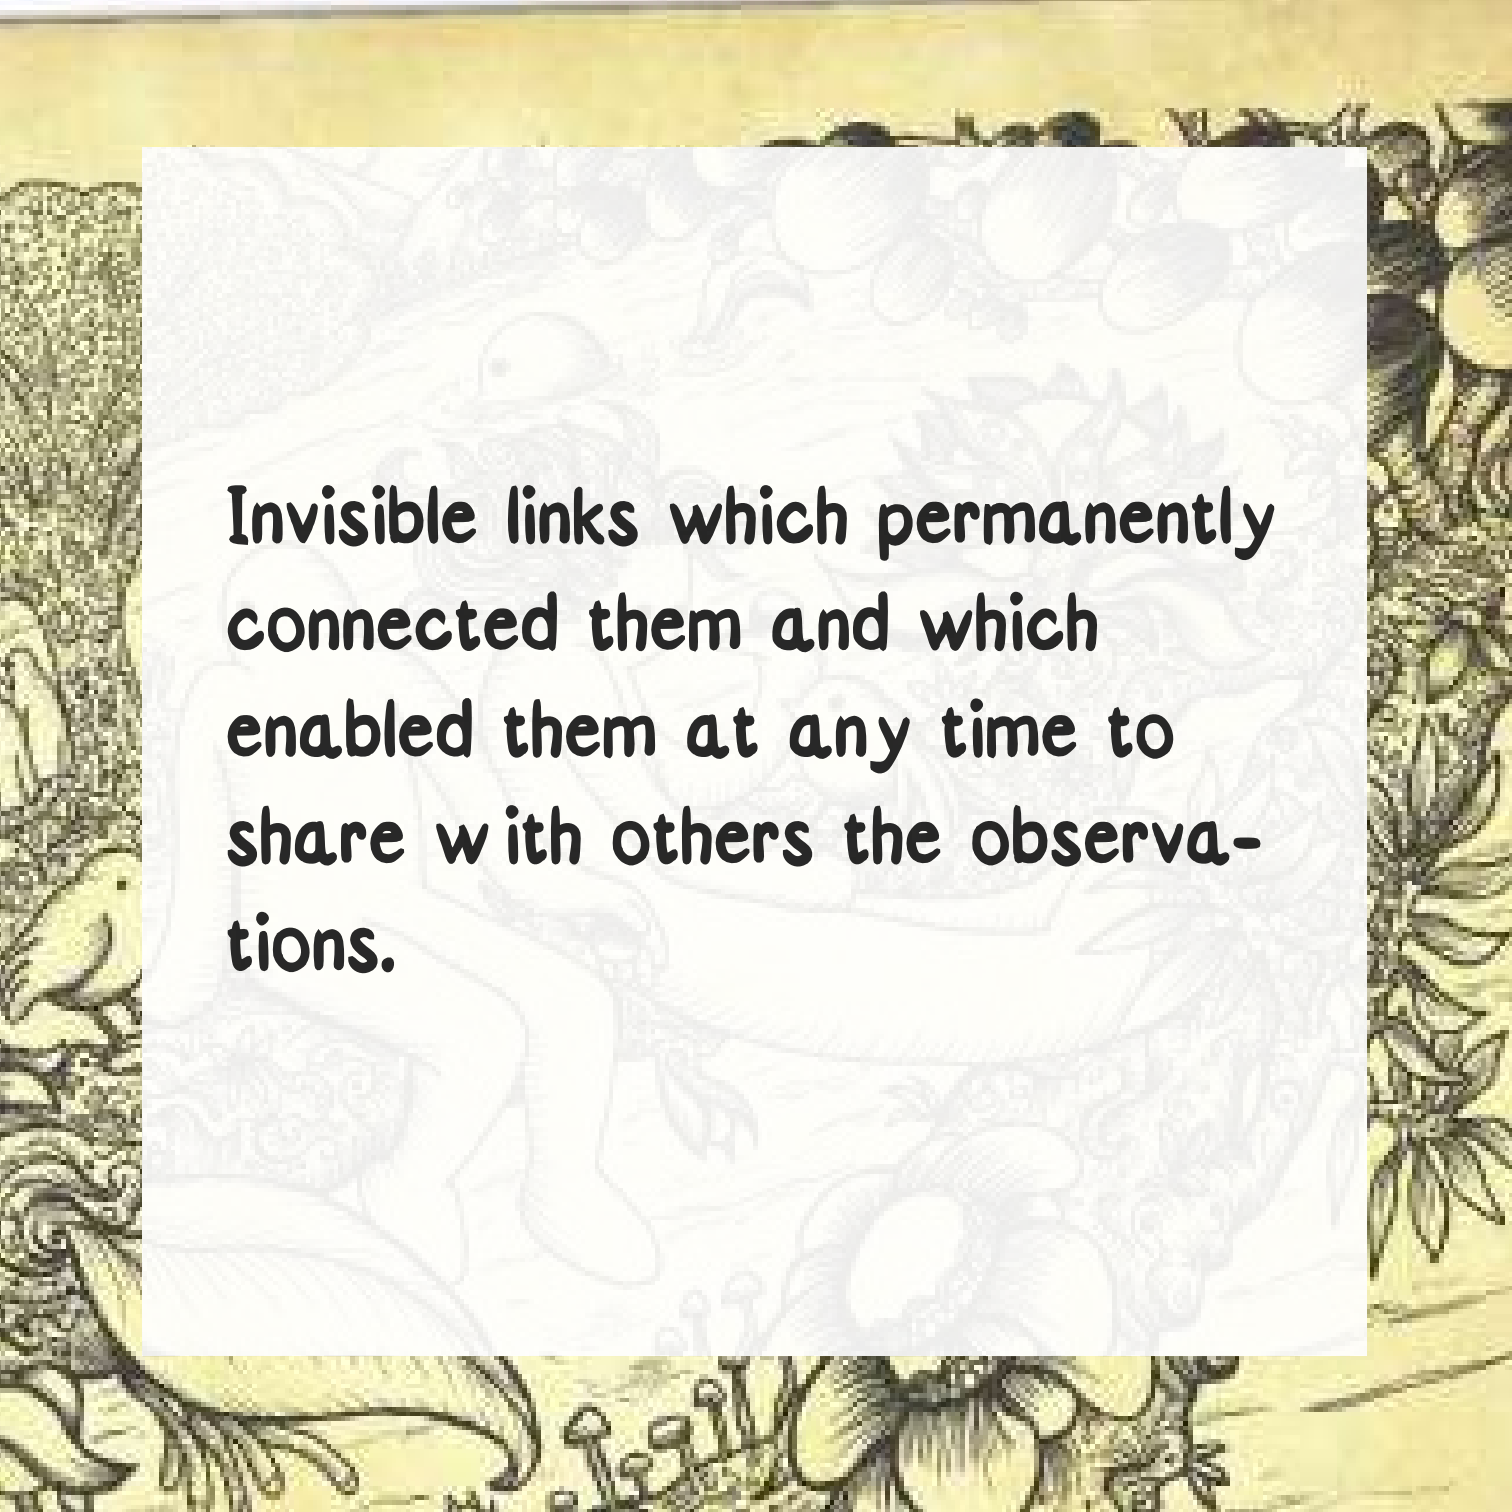

There was no struggle between them and therefore no particular objective.

From an outside point of view, no organization could be discerned among them.

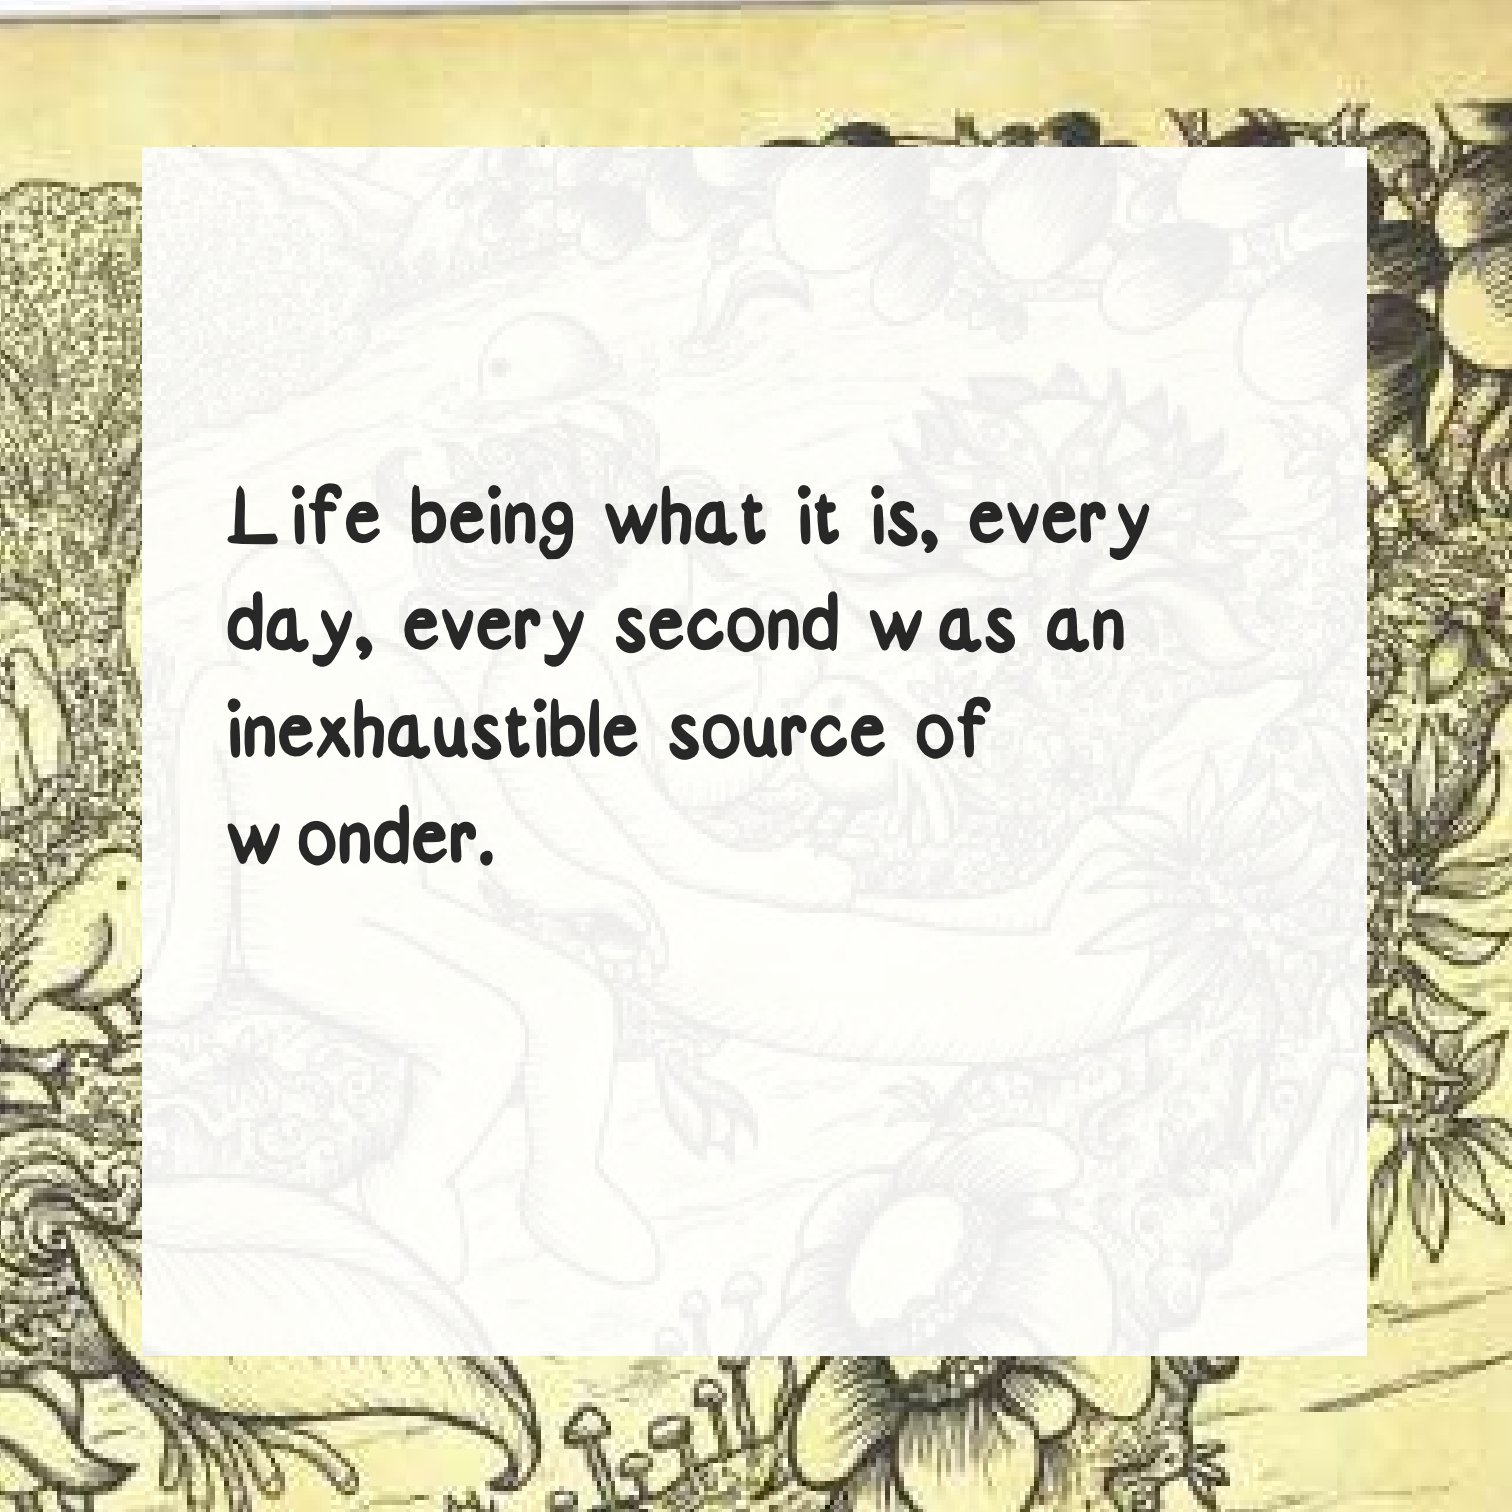

As we got closer, we could sense close communication in beings.

Something that kept them constantly in touch.

Invisible links which permanently connected them and which enabled them at any time to share with others the observations.

Life being what it is, every day, every second was an inexhaustible source of wonder.

They lived. Quite simply.
